The Five Strangers

Dear Miss Granville, Mr. McCandless, Ms. Hayward, her brother Ulysses, and Mr. Franks,

I am afraid I cannot see clearly enough to know which of you will receive this letter. And I hope that it finds you in good health, although I can see that you are in great danger.

It is, indeed, on the matter of danger that I write you. I have seen you walking through ravenous shadows. I am having trouble seeing the paper for how near they have drawn to you.

I hope that you might find the time to call upon me. It would be much appreciated and, I think, in your best interests.

Tricia Piper
